We just completed a very intense and fulfilling tour in Egypt with 98 Shaumbra from 23 countries. The 12-day tour – the 4th Shaumbra Egypt tour since 2009 – has a dynamic way of putting everything in one’s life into perspective. Visiting the ancient temples and pyramids is akin to going back and visiting one’s past. Being away from regular activities provides the opportunity to look at life from a different viewpoint, like being out of time, space and routine.

So here at the end of the tour, having a few relaxing moments at the historic Mena House hotel after saying good bye to Shaumbra last night, I have the chance to imagine what comes next for the Crimson Circle. Of course it’s only a potential, and it’s only my personal vision. Ultimately, the expansion of Shaumbra will come from Shaumbra, but I would like the opportunity to share my thoughts.

Since 1999 the Crimson Circle has grown into a global affiliation of humanly divine masters. The Shaumbra library now consists of 13 years of channeled monthly messages (about 144 total), 7 Advanced Studies courses, over 1200 channels given during workshops, four books and nearly 150 channel sets on various topics available for purchase. There are about 20,000 pages of messages from Tobias, Adamus Saint-Germain and Kuthumi lal Singh. These materials are a history of Shaumbra’s spiritual awakening, and the crossing over from the old energy era into the new consciousness. The materials provide guidance, tools and answers for humans venturing into their awakening and sovereignty. Our best teachers are ourselves, along with the loving assistance from Tobias, Adamus and Kuthumi. We were brought together by our common journey into spiritual awakening, and our passion is to assist others in theirs.

The Shaumbra consciousness has now come to a focus of embodied enlightenment – staying in the physical reality while living as true masters. This compassionate resonance allows little if any space for drama, chronic processing, presumptuous teachers, power-driven leaders – and especially makyo. Our journeys are personal and individual, yet we have the comfort and companionship of an estimated 100,000 kindred spirits around the world who call themselves Shaumbra. All of this is done without creeds or pledges, memberships or oaths, directives or manifestos.

I see the Crimson Circle going in two directions that may appear to be contradictory, but actually they are not at all. The future for our organization is the expanded use of webinar-style classes via the Internet, and a retreat center with physical buildings and beautiful land, similar with our Mystery Schools of times past.

Internet Gatherings – The Internet is what has brought the Crimson Circle to where it is today. Our first website went live in early 2000, and immediately provided a mechanism for all of us to connect. I remember watching the web statistics back then, and being totally amazed at how people from around the world suddenly began connecting to Crimson Circle and each other. It was almost like...
Shaumbra were waiting for a vehicle to re-connect after many lifetimes of separation. Shortly afterwards we started webcasting the monthly meetings – first in audio and later in video – and suddenly we were a global organization. The Internet is how we came back together again.

Internet gatherings are now the preferred method for getting out the latest information about our awakening progress. We use it for the monthly Shouds, the Awakening Zone Radio network, and social media sites for teachers, graduates, Crimson Circle Angels, and the new Awakening Zone Academy. We use Internet technology for the Keahak group where Adamus’ messages are transmitted twice each month. I’ve never put a priority on books because it takes up to two years to get a book published and distributed. But with the Internet, the messages are delivered in the moment, instantly available to Shaumbra around the world.

The Awakening Zone Academy is our next level of expansion with web-based classes. Here we can offer live or pre-recorded classes housed within an elegant and easy-to-use social media site. Participants can view the videos on their own schedule, chat with other participants, check on the latest group news and information, or just sit in the energy of this Internet dimension. I’m very proud of how the Crimson Circle staff, headed by Michelle MacHale, has embraced Internet technology to offer Shaumbra access to a wide variety of new information about our awakening process.

Internet classes and gatherings will continue to play an essential role for Shaumbra. There’s no need to travel, you can connect with the material based on your schedule, and we can offer the information immediately, without delay.

Shaumbra New Earth Center – I’ve heard it said that a physical brick-and-mortar facility is old energy. I don’t think so. In spite of the wonders of Internet-based gatherings, there’s still a need to connect in the physical world. While we’re still here on Earth, it’s important to be together in our physical reality. We need to share a real breath, look into each others eyes, hear each others voices, and hold each others hands. All of the Internet stuff is great, but as Adamus says, there is nothing comparable to the physical experience. So let’s get physical. It’s time we manifested a Shaumbra Retreat Center. It would become our Home Base, our Island of Consciousness, and our connection point to this great planet.

The benefits and blessings of having our own retreat and conference center became very obvious in January. We actually found a beautiful property right here in Coal Creek Canyon, Colorado. It had about 125 acres (50 hectares) of wooded property, a meeting hall for 250 Shaumbra, lodging for 50+ people, several houses and just about everything we could want for a Crimson Circle center. We submitted an offer to buy the property but in late January decided to withdraw it based on the Seller’s unrealistic conditions that would have put Crimson Circle at unreasonable risk for environmental and water rights issues. But…. it gave us a very clear picture of the importance of having our own center. Not only would it be a place to connect with each other in the physical during workshops, as well as with the loving energies of Earth, it would also be the headquarters for our Internet audio/video studio, the Awakening Zone Radio network, and our monthly meetings.

Crimson Circle has some of the best Internet technologies available to keep our large global spiritual community connected in a timely and interdimensional manner. Now it’s time for the next step: A Shaumbra New Earth Center. It will be a physical location to ground and house the physical aspects of our work here on this planet. This year we will scout locations that have the appropriate energetic qualities. We’ll call on Shaumbra investors to raise the funds to purchase the property debt-free, and we’ll create what so many of us have dreamt about for many lifetimes: A center for radiating our enlightenment and new consciousness.

During the January Shoud, Adamus said it was time to either let go of our dreams, or make them our new reality. This is one dream we can’t let go of, so it’s time to Make It So.
It was a very simple assignment – write some meta-tag descriptions for Awakening Zone Radio web site. John Kuderka sent me the e-mail late Friday afternoon, the day before the February Shoud.

Awakening Zone Radio has a beautiful web site with thousands of hours of wisdom and inspiration in its archives, but people are having a hard time finding it. As the new AZR Manager, search engine optimization is on the top of my to-do list. I searched the Internet for an article about what makes a good meta-tag, opened Text Pad and started to write. Then I got VERY sleepy.

There’s the sleepy where I know I need a nap, and then there’s another kind of sleepy – the kind where something is up energetically. And this energy was one I recognized – Metatron – the mother of all Archangels.

My first encounter with him was back in 2002. That year, Crimson Circle monthly meetings were held at a hotel in Denver. Metatron decided to join the party and knocked the lights out in the ballroom. The whole place went dark except for skinny shafts of lights around the doors. My friends and I went to dinner afterward and all of us felt as if we’d been plugged into super-high-voltage outlets that our bodies weren’t ready for. So I recognized the energy signature.

Metatron doesn’t speak to me, thoughts just form in my head. Yes, I wonder if I’m making it up; but I’ve learned to just play with it and see what happens. If I’m making it up it usually just goes away. But this made sense to me – I was writing meta-tags and Metatron wanted to help. The problem is, I don’t tolerate his energy well. But what wonderful energy to weave into our web site! I decided to do my best and let him hang out until I finished the assignment. That night I was fast asleep by eight o’clock!

The next day my husband Ben and I were getting ready to drive to Coal Creek Canyon for the Shoud.

“We need to leave a little early so we can stop at Starbucks.”

“Why, we just had coffee?”

“Metatron wants a latte.”

I married well. Ben only paused for a moment before saying “Sure...”

Coffee is one of Metatron’s favorite things about human life – all food really. As we’ve heard so many times, the tangible things we take for granted are treasured deeply in the angelic realms. Him being so close to Earth through me was an opportunity to indulge in human life. Plus, he would get to experience the Shoud from our side of the veil.

I’ve learned to expect something different every month that I walk into the Coal Creek Community Center. February for me was electric, jittery, over-amped. It seemed like everyone was jumpy. Was it me? Adamus? Or was it good old Metatron? I ate TWO of Paul Cook’s amazing brownies – one for me and one for Metatron – and after the channel we went to the Wondervu for margaritas and Mexican food. I wanted to make sure my guest had a good time.

But Sunday morning I woke up exhausted. I hadn’t had THAT many margaritas. I knew that carrying Metatron’s energy was wearing me out. On the Sunday after the channel, Ben and I usually go to Norma and Garret’s house for their Breathe Around the World webcast. I would release Metatron with Norma’s breathing session. So I headed downstairs – with a cup of coffee – to write the meta-tags. With every word I crafted, I set the intention that Metatron’s energy was going into my writing, to weave into the code of our web site, to reach out to the world and attract the people who would be helped by the information they would find there.

By the time I got to Norma and Garret’s house my encounter with Metatron felt like a dream. Had I made it up? I wondered. Without even thinking about it I poured myself a cup of coffee and grabbed a sweet roll. I took one sip and burst into tears. It was Metatron’s last taste for a while. I bit into the sweet roll and tasted cinnamon like it was my first time. With the bitterness of the coffee, the sweetness of the roll, and the salt of my tears I said goodbye.

Metatron was here to give me the gift of weaving energy into our web site, but, for a little while at least, Metatron got to experience the joys of Earth.

MARCH 2013

Foz do Iguacu, Brasil • March 22-24, 2013

Presented by Geoffrey & Linda Hoppe, with channelings from Adamus
Featuring live music with Yoham (Gerhard Fankhauser, Einat Gilboa and Amir Ya'acoby)

Join us in Foz do Iguacu, near world-renowned Iguacu Falls (Cataratas do Iguacu), Brasil in March 2013 for a passionate and enlightening DreamWalker Life school with Adamus Saint-Germain.

DreamWalker Life is designed for Shaumbra who are choosing a joyful, abundant and conscious experience in physical reality. Adamus has said that the new Masters will not necessarily leave their bodies when they realize enlightenment; they will live within the Body of Consciousness to enjoy life, work and play with other humans, experience Nature in a new way, and serve as Standards for coming generations. DreamWalker Life offers insights and guidance for living an enlightened life, in joy.

The young girl stood outside her school gates, drinking in the colours of the cluster of beautiful Autumn leaves in her hands. From past experience, she knew bringing such a collection into school wasn’t tolerated. In fact, only yesterday she’d been marched back to the gates by a zealous prefect and made to deposit her precious leaves outside. But letting go was soooooo hard... In the end, the tolling of the school bell ended her stupor: from the sheer fear of being late, she dropped the bundle and raced inside. Her attention throughout the day was permeated with sadness at being parted from the beautiful leaves with their exquisite hues.

That young girl was me, and the pattern continued into adulthood and recent times – collecting beautiful objects, beginning with natural things (fallen rose petals, shells from Cornish beaches, stones and rocks from Scotland) then extending to glass animals, hand-made Japanese dolls, books, music scores, drawing pencils of all colours and materials, and much more. I couldn’t pass a 2nd-hand bookshop without buying books. What I didn’t consider was that I used only a fraction of what I had. Collecting and Having were what counted. I now see that it was my ‘insurance’, my creation of a false world for myself in which I felt buffered from the hurt outside. Afraid to be who I really was and not really knowing that either, I re-created a Self through what I collected.

My mother was not pleased with my collections. The disorder – as she saw it – didn’t fit her rigid sense of tidiness, and she solved this by systematically destroying my things when angry. When I went to University she simply threw out my collections. I mourned their loss, not having made the decision to part with them myself.

In 1986 I moved from England to Germany, because I’d fallen in love with the trees here. Between choosing to emigrate (1981), and actually arriving, I also fell in love and acquired a German fiancée. Whilst helping me unpack he viewed my clothes, told me that I couldn’t possibly wear such stuff here and simply took charge by disposing of everything except what I was wearing. Trusting him, I gave up my power and let him buy me a completely new wardrobe, from socks to pajamas to winter coat. But the clothes were his choice, not mine, and I grieved at the loss of my old, safe things.

Moving into a spacious house gave me ample opportunity to continue with collecting, and over the next twenty years I filled shelves and boxes with all sorts of things, again as a way of creating an identity for myself in a world full of hurt.

The process of finding out Who I Am, and allowing myself to Be that, really began with taking Tobias’ Sexual Energies School in 2006. And it has so expanded that at the beginning of 2013 I felt startlingly ready to Let Go of the past, to Let Go of what I didn’t use and need, to Let Go of what was no longer Me. At last – ready to take back my power!!

Having made the choice, I began immediately and rejoiced in my newfound freedom to Let Go. It seemed natural to choose a new area each day and I worked on it for one week. I tackled books, clothes, electrical equipment, kitchen things, CD’S, videos, DVD’s, drawing and writing things, letters, School and University... notes, teaching worksheets and books, the contents of the freezer, my own original music creations, food tins and packets, furniture, suitcases and bags.

The truly amazing thing that has happened throughout this experience is that this whole action wasn’t just about Letting Go of material objects. Inevitably, going through so much from the past brought back vivid memories, such as the smell of the cockle boats and the sound of the bunting from many small moored boats blowing in the wind during the ‘forced’ Sunday afternoon walks my mother thought we should make along the seafront – one of her ways of presenting us to the world as a ‘normally-functioning’ family. I remembered my total misery on these walks as we trudged along in silence and fear, was able to have compassion for myself then, and finally Let Go of a memory I’d not been able to face for so long. I also giggled at the sheer ridiculousness of it all, the fear and the way we lived.

So many memories surfaced – aspects queuing up – that I needed to be very clear that these were only aspects, and welcome them home instead of becoming overwhelmed.

I marveled at myself, at the richness and variety of experiences I’ve chosen in this lifetime, and then Let them Go as they’re no longer relevant. I honoured the sadness, the desperation, the humiliation, the anger, the fear – above all, the fear – that I no longer need. I also honoured the choice of giving up my power so readily to others – something for which I’ve been much criticised by family and ‘friends’ – and acknowledged that at the time, it was the way I chose to survive. I’ve let it all go, including the shame and guilt.

Several people have asked me what my method was in the Letting Go action. My answer is ‘to follow my heart and intuition, not my mind’. I didn’t make any plans for how I’d do work; I just began it. I listened to my body and rested whenever I began to tire, often sleeping for several hours. It felt right to eat little, simply and often, instead of stopping to prepare large solid meals. My food desires changed a lot, eating things I don’t usually go for, and I drank – and drank and drank – water.

The most important thing I’ve learnt from this is that you can only really Let Go when you take back your power and make the choice from your soul, not your head. YOU are the most important person in your life! So make your choice alone, for you. NO MORE keeping that valuable vase you were given by a dear Aunt but which you’ve never liked. NO MORE storing things that others ‘passed on’ when they hadn’t the courage to throw them out. I don’t regret throwing out anything at all, not one object, and I feel lighter because I’ve integrated aspects, and recognised and released emotional baggage.

Those times in my past when others forced a decision on me or ‘helped’ me were not truly Letting Go and I still need to integrate some of these. Being aware of this means that I haven’t touched anything belonging to my children, both of whom are away studying. I hope that they’ll also experience that moment when they say ‘Now I’m ready to Let Go’.

Now I feel so free! This whole experience of Letting Go has brought me so much more than my human self could foresee, but I’m sure my soul knew what was coming. So if you feel you ‘ought’, ‘should’ or ‘must’ Let Go of surplus belongings, or if your mind says you’ll never manage it with your health, job, or other commitments, etc., perhaps, it’s better to wait till the glorious time when your whole being screams NOW!

From my perspective each life’s expression is driven by a question, a quest and a greater yet to be. This inner passion is often known to us as children; and for me my question was to know God’s designer universe. I wondered how God created so many kinds of flowers, people with different skin, and I pondered on the disparities in life’s circumstances.

Along life’s journey one can seemed to get side tracked, well until you get old enough to step back and see where all the dots connect. Through a series of seemingly unconnected events life began to unravel its mysteries and, like any excited kid, I wanted to show someone, anyone, everyone what I had discovered!

I found a fusion of knowledge from modern to ancient, some of which is unconventional, but when weaved together it fits like a fine tapestry.

The beauty of this symphony is that, when understood, it is very self-empowering. We are the creator and the master painter of our own reality. The available expression is as infinite as resonance – a musical scale, where life is “noted” starting with our DNA.

Matter is made to matter and this is our consciousness on display. We are like the drops or particles dancing and rearranging with the music we listen to and play.

I was listening to Gregg Braden a while back and had one of those Ah-ha! moments. He said, “Whatever you bring ‘charge’ to, good or bad, you will magnetize into your life.” This is where the idea of free will made sense, along with the notion that we live in an electric universe.

Our “charge” is our “current” issue. Our “charge” and “current” circulates through our neural network (brain, heart, etc.). The Chinese called this our meridian system. They understood that life force energy flows through our entire body system. Where our life force is restricted is a clue to where our energy is constricted. The Chinese consider this life force energy a road map to your life’s condition/resonance as your “inner chi” is your energy.

So what is energy and how does it flow? Energy is defined as an interrelating system and when you really get a grasp of this you can see that ALL systems, from the planets to your cells, are living and interchanging. All systems also unravel or expand like the nautilus shell, from a galaxy to a snail to your inner ear. This geometric pattern is also fractal, unfolding like an electrical discharge treeing pattern, and you can see this from your lungs to a lightning strike to a snowflake.

God, the Force, the Field, is a sea of poetic and infinite expression. It’s your charge, your energy that directs the flow. We are more magnificent than we are told. Nature is the clue. As Kepler reminds us, God uses simplicity.

So I invite some of the most inquiring minds of our time to come and explore with me. Discover where east meets west, heart greets mind, and science and spirit connect. Break through and explore with innovative thinkers, leading edge scientists, inspired artists, and best selling authors.

Time of the Sixth Sun – Dreaming Ourselves Awake is one of the most beautiful films of our new times. It’s an epic docu-drama about the awakening and transformation of global consciousness, a witnessing of these times and the huge potential we have for change in the world, in the way we relate to it and in the way we live in it.

As some of you may know, the film’s director, Nikki Williams and her production crew recently embarked on a two-month Kickstarter crowd funding appeal to raise completion funds for the edit and distribution costs so they can get this to the screen by June 22, 2013, the summer solstice and the date that Adamus recommended for release. The summer solstice is just four short months away, the lightest day of the year and a perfect day for releasing a midsummers day dream. But they can’t do it alone and they need your help. Kickstarter is an ‘all or nothing’ campaign and sadly they did not reach their target goal, and therefore received none of the pledged funds. For those of Shaumbra who pledged to the film, please be aware that no monies were actually collected from your accounts.

Nikki and her crew are appealing to Shaumbra around the world, including those who pledged via Kickstarter, to now go to the website for Time of the Sixth Sun and donate directly by clicking on the DONATE button at the bottom of each page. (The conversion rate is approximately £1 GBP = $US1.55)

The film has been nine years in production and has so far been funded by the hearts of amazing people all over the world, and amazing example of how we can come together to consciously and collaboratively co-create as a group of like-minded souls. By doing so, we are quite literally dreaming this new world into being.

The storyline is guided by Tobias (recorded just before his departure in 2009), who speaks to us on behalf of the collective from across time and space as we hear the transmissions of many of our world’s wisdom keepers. The film explores our awakening process from the point of seeding this planet through to humanity’s ascension as we move into a more evolved state of being and ascend to a higher level of collective consciousness.

The following article (page 11 - 12) is an excerpt from a message that Tobias gave specifically for the film back in 2009 just prior to Nikki recording his narration for the storyline.

As mentioned last month, it is very, very rare that we make an appeal to Shaumbra for financial support of projects, but this is one we have tremendous passion for. If you resonate with the consciousness that helped put this together, and with the special message from Tobias, please help launch Time of the Sixth Sun with your donations.

A Message from Tobias

This channel was recorded in July, 2009 specifically for Nikki Williams, producer of the "Time of the Sixth Sun" documentary film. It has not been publicly released until now.

And so it is. It is I, Tobias. I’m going to speak here for just a moment before we actually get into the recording (for the movie). I’m going to adjust how I sit – not so much how Cauldre prefers to sit. I’m going to make a few comments here and then we’ll get into the taping.

Bringing in all of the energies of this intense and high consciousness film into this gathering right now with all of you who are here, of course, but we’re taking a moment to adjust to the energies for all of its potentials, for all of those who will ever view this, for all of those who indeed will help to finance this for you. Bringing in the potentials right now of those who are beginning on their journey of awakening. Even they don’t know it yet, but something deep within them called out, whether it was years ago in this lifetime, whether it was many lifetimes ago, whether they were in the monasteries or any of the other religious orders, whether they were holders of the energies of Earth for this new awakening.

Let’s bring their consciousness into this film right now – not just the ones who are on tape, not just I, Tobias, but of all of them – because indeed what you are doing here is, you are creating a universal product. You are creating what I’m going to term here and in our discussion, “the Fruit of the Rose.” The Fruit of the Rose is a term that I use that describes the awakening or the remembering that we all put on Earth for ourselves, knowing that at a certain time the awakening would be here. We would need to remind ourselves, or indeed the angelic beings on the other realms help to remind humans. Gaia herself has the energy of remembrance in herself, but ultimately it comes down to each and every individual human, allowing themselves to remember that they put their own awakening message, their own awakening sign on this Earth in their reality, in their physical body for themselves, and we call this “the fruit of the rose.”

It is so easy to get lost in this duality, and it’s so easy to forget your way and forget where you came from. It’s so easy to get immersed in this thing called human reality on Earth, and you forget. So many humans create a type of nightmare for themselves, repeating lifetimes over and over, coming back to Earth with the same relationships as the ones that they had just left, coming back to the same problems and difficulties and challenges. It is indeed like a bad dream, and they keep trying to find their way out of that prison. They keep trying to discover new ways to break out but all of the time, because they’re using the old human tools, in a way they are just digging themselves in deeper.

There does come a point of surrender, also a point of remembering. When they come across this beautiful symbol, the fruit of the rose, the reminder that they put on Earth for themselves to awaken, then the awakening process starts unfolding. It doesn’t happen in one day or one year, and for many humans it may not even happen in one lifetime. But the process indeed does start happening. Everything starts changing with the human. The very path that they had been on, the path of what you’d call destiny or karma, starts to change. At that point the human feels that they are out of control because the old systems aren’t working anymore. Their old tricks aren’t working. Something is happening deep within them. They feel very much like the caterpillar going into it’s cocoon, not knowing what’s going to happen next, transforming into what the old caterpillar feels is ‘mush,’ losing all of it’s caterpillar strengths and it’s caterpillar tendencies and it’s caterpillar defences. At this point of course, the caterpillar – or the human – is terrorized, frightened, filled with fear and uncertainty, going into a period of the dark night of the soul. But is it really? Is it really the dark night of the soul or is it the surrendering back unto themselves? Is it the releasing of all of the caterpillar illusions and all of the caterpillar lies, the releasing of the caterpillar mind so that it can emerge into what it truly is – a butterfly.

The humans who are going through their awakening find many, many parallels with this. They start to lose their mind, or control of their mind. It’s not that anybody is taking that away from them, rather it is that they are going beyond the limitations of the mind, limitations that were placed there when the angels first came to Earth. Limitations that were intensified in the times of Atlantis with what many of you may remember as the ‘headbands.’ The headbands that were in used in Atlantis to conform the mind to make it standard for all humans, but eventually used for things like mind control.

Right now, those who are awakening are going out of their minds. They’re discovering that there’s something much grander, what you may call the soul, the divine intelligence, the all-knowing mind. It goes far beyond the capabilities of the human mind and, unlike the human mind, in the reservoirs of its memories it contains no judgement. It contains no limitation. It contains no duality, the duality of love and hate, masculine and feminine, light and dark. The divine mind does not judge these things; it just understands its own experience.

In the awakening, the body starts to transmute. What some may feel is the body falling apart is not at all. The body is releasing its old systems to create new systems. It’s transforming at the level of the DNA and, even deeper than that, the body is bringing up an element that it’s always had but has long been put away. That is the element of rejuvenation – the ability to cleanse itself without having to overload yourself with vitamins, with systems, with programs, but simply giving permission for your body to heal. Giving permission for your body to do what it already knows how to do. It can re-grow limbs. It can purify the cells that are cancerous. The body knows how to revitalise the heart and every organ, even if they have been in the physical body for a hundred years or more. The body knows how to rejuvenate itself. The body can rejuvenate so that you can begin your next lifetime in the same physical body that you have now, transcending death until you choose you no longer need or want to be here on Earth.

The body has this capability already within it, and in the awakening, the body goes through a transformation, a clearing and a cleansing to make way for your own natural healing system. So if it feels like your body is falling apart, fear not those wrinkles that you get on your face, fear not if you end up sick for a period of time because your body is going through an intense cleansing. As fear not, as many of you do, coming in contact with what you consider out of balance energies outside of you, because your body already knows how to transmute. You see, energy is just energy. When you go beyond the illusion that there’s good or bad, or healthy and unhealthy, light or dark, you begin to understand that energy is just energy. It was created from a pure space. It was put into motion and put into structure by you, to help solidify your reality, and at any time when you come into the place of openness, compassion and surrender to your self, you can transmute ANY energy, no matter how light or dark, no matter how imbalanced, because at it’s core, you’ll recognise that it is just energy.

This film is part of the Fruit of the Rose for so many people – tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands or millions – who’ll hear the words, see the pictures and feel the essence; the essence of what is contained herein, not just playing on a screen or through speakers but the essence as being brought together by its producers, by its supporters, by those who are on film. It is a way of bringing together a unified message, a message of awakening, a call to awakening. That is what the energy and the consciousness of this creation is about.

Allow yourself to sink deep into it because you are in this production as well, even if you don’t appear on the screen, even if you think you have never heard of this production before, if you are listening to it, if you are watching it, you are part of the essence. Your energy, your Fruit of the Rose is in here just as well.

DREAMWALK FOR RELEASING WOUNDS with Adamus Saint-Germain

Part of being human means that we experience wounding, whether through other people’s malice or indifference, unexpected accidents and loss, or perhaps through our own self-judgment. These wounds, and even from past lifetimes, leave scars that can distort and limit our current expression. Join in as Adamus guides this experience into release and freedom.

BEYOND THE PROPHECIES with Adamus Saint-Germain and Geoffrey & Linda Hoppe

In his usual provocative and insightful manner, Adamus talks with the audience about enlightenment, about our history in Atlantis and the Mystery Schools, loving self, choosing new potentials, the New Earth, and much more. Attendees said it seemed that Adamus compressed years worth of wisdom and information into just a few hours.

Coming soon I-M SYSTEM OF ENERGY CREATION with Dee Wallace

On the way home from the Shoud a few weeks ago, I felt tired and quiet after the long day. Adamus had just delivered a message about dreams, and encouraged us to either let them go or make them real. I looked out at the sparkling night sky and wondered, “So what is my dream?”

Like many of us, I’d been thinking about my dreams since he mentioned them in January. It was good to realize that I’m already living many of them, and have let others go that no longer felt appropriate. But there are still some of my dreams that haven’t come true yet. Things like traveling the world giving workshops, leading sacred tours and retreats, writing a couple of bestseller books (or just finishing a book!), owning my own home; these were some of the dreams and expectations still drifting out there in Someday land.

So that night on the way home, I was mostly wondering which one of those dreams was “the big one” that was time to bring in. They all seemed like a lot of work, and I was actually a bit nervous about what the answer might be, because “then what?” If my dream to teach all over the world turned out to be the most important thing, how would that screw up the life I’m currently enjoying? What if bringing in my dreams just messed everything up? Hmm, no wonder I’ve kept them out there …

“What is my real dream?” I asked. And the answer was suddenly there – not in words but as a knowing, not in a rush of excitement but as a warm swell of love. My truest dream was ME! My human self. My body.

Then came the doubt. “What kind of silly dream is that? It’s supposed to be a BIG dream. What’s my body got to do with anything?” You see, it’s mostly been annoying me lately with aches and pains and extra weight that won’t leave, not to mention all the other hassles that come with having a physical self to haul around. How does that qualify as a dream to bring in?

Sure that it must be something else, I took a deep breath and felt again. And the same answer was still there in a wash of feeling so clear and intense it started leaking from my eyes. I’d found something true.

My self. My body. What did it mean to have that as my dream? And what would it mean to make it real? I began to realize it meant things like making my body a place where I want to be, not just some uncooperative thing I boss around like a mule. It meant listening to it, loving it, even – gasp! – pampering and indulging it. It meant making my self a priority instead of an afterthought. It meant no more complaining about my weight but actually – and lovingly – doing something about it, even if that something is total acceptance.

Every time I thought about this dream over the next few days, the energy was still so intense my eyes would leak. I knew it was the big one. After all, what is more important than really being here, in total love and enjoyment of myself? That’s why I came to Earth, and it’s exactly what my soul has been waiting for. Why would it come live with me if I don’t care for or even like its home? If taking care of me is always an afterthought, if I never make time to really enjoy this body, then what’s the difference between this and all my other lifetimes?

Believe it or not, the minute I decided to stop dreaming this dream and actually make it real, not Someday but now, all sorts of supportive potentials started showing up. Issues came up too. Could I actually have the audacity to request — no, to command — abundance into my life just in order to spoil myself?? Is ‘just me’ enough to bother the universe about? Could I trust that the abundance would be there for everything else if I really did put myself first? And on top of all that, making it real meant I would actually have to stop fussing and complaining about my body. No more ‘magical thinking’ if I wanted it to be different. Now would be the time for action.

Yes, it is definitely time to manifest this precious dream of a beautiful, carefree, comfortable body reveling in its aliveness and dancing in passionate reunion with its soul. All those other dreams are really just distractions. They’ll settle into their appropriate reality when this dream of ME is real.

What's your truest dream? It might be something different for you than it was for me, but one thing it for sure: “I don’t know” isn’t true. Your answer is there, and your Self will let you know what it is. Simply ask the question, take a deep breath, and feel. The answer will appear if you allow, and it's likely to be much simpler than you expected. However, allowing yourself to know your answer will also mean no more excuses. It can seem much easier to wish and complain than to make real changes. Maybe it’s the inertia of human existence, or maybe the hesitation of releasing our dreams and taking responsibility for our lives. But believe me, the energy and passion of your truest dream easily overrides all inertia and hesitation.

Oh, one more thing. Your truest dream isn’t going to manifest on the other side of the veil. Everything over there is already a dream, we came here to make it real. I know some of you are tired, haven’t found your dreams, and just want to leave. But what do you suppose is going to happen once you’re “gone”? That restless desire to make it real will kick in again. It’s what brought you here in the first place. It’s what pulled you through so many lifetimes full of joy and hardship, and it won’t stop until you are fully reunited with your Self — for real. And that happens here on Earth, in your human body.

Connecting with your truest soul dream is an intimate and precious experience that it has nothing to do with anyone else. Are you ready to bless yourself that much?

In this beautiful message (given during the DreamWalker Life event in Estes Park, Colorado) Kuthumi talks about what life will be like when living on Earth as an Ascended Master. Talking about the grace, ease, and the preciousness of life, he reminds us that abundance and balanced biology are the natural state of being, and that the joy and radiance of living Ascended Masters can change the world. Then, accompanied by the live music of Yoham, Kuthumi shares a poignant tale of the search for his own soul.

“Call of the Soul” is a precious and beautiful tale, given with Kuthumi’s incomparable compassion, wit and grace.

And it is a beautiful follow-up to his “Soul Encounter” and “Yes, I Am Enlightened” messages.
