This month’s article was inspired by a tabloid newspaper. I was standing in the check-out line at a grocery store the other day and got to reading one of the tabloids. Wow! There’s a lot of news I could have never imagined! I didn’t know that five U.S. Senators are actually space aliens and are plotting an invasion! Or that a woman in Oregon (U.S.) recently gave birth to Big Foot’s baby! I also learned that a missing airplane from 1944 was recently found on the dark side of the moon! And Einstein’s brain was preserved in 1955 and has now come to life! I have to start reading more tabloids just to keep up on this amazing news.

So I decided to share some little known and/or never revealed facts of my own. It might not be quite as exciting as the tabloid news, but at least all of this is 100% real and true.

• I actually met St. Germain several months before I encountered Tobias. It was a weird meeting with the Ascended Master, more like a fuzzy imagination or lucid dream. I don’t remember the date, although it happened just as I was falling asleep. I was in an ancient stone building, maybe a castle. Candles on the walls provided the only light so everything was dim. The room seemed very familiar but I didn’t know why. A door opened and a gentleman dressed in a long purple cape walked toward me as if he were floating. He appeared to be in his late 40’s, slightly gray beard and longish hair. He was handsome but not pretty, in a Sean Connery kind of manly way. He talked to me for a moment but for the life of me I don’t remember what he said, other than at the end of this brief encounter he said, “I won’t see you for a long time but I will return.” Then he disappeared.
He didn’t walk back through the doorway, he just poofed into thin air. I felt sad and slightly confused afterwards, like a good friend just said goodbye. I would later learn this was a visit from St. Germain, about 4 months before I met Tobias.

• Linda and I got married in the courthouse on May 19, 1977, the day the first Star Wars was released. We have no photos of our wedding or reception because the photographer didn’t load the film cartridge correctly. The next day we went on our honeymoon to Jamaica, with my grandparents. It’s complicated.

• Linda and I met in 4th grade (about 9 years old). We were in the same Catholic school class for the first half of the year. We worked at the same department store in high school, and went on our first date in May of our senior year. We’ve been married longer than any of our siblings or parents. Many family members lost money on bets about how long our marriage would last.

• Adamus’ Act of Consciousness book is ranked #6 in the Best Consciousness Books of All Time at BookAuthority.org. He comes in ahead of Deepak Chopra (#11), Dalai Lama (#13) and Carl Sagan (#19), and right behind Ram Dass (#5) and don Miguel Ruiz (#3). Adamus is almost certainly strutted around the Ascended Masters Club over that news.

• Linda majored in Nursing her first year in college, but then changed her major to Art History when she realized she didn’t like the sight of blood. She taught Art in public schools in Wisconsin and Texas for 7 years before becoming the Fashion Manager for a large U.S. retailer with over 900 stores. She traveled to exotic places like India, Nepal and Hong Kong so she was an experienced traveler even before we started globe-trotting for Crimson Circle.

• Dr. Doug Davies did an astrology chart for Crimson Circle when we officially incorporated in 2006. The first part of the chart was a little “rough,” but then it was filled with huge potentials and opportunities. Indeed, the period between 2006-2009 had its share of chaos and issues, both internal and external. We got past all of that and it’s been like an amazing dream ever since. 2009 was also the year Adamus came in.

- Linda and I don’t do private channels for ourselves with Adamus. We used to do it once in a while with Tobias, but the few private channeled sessions we’ve done with Adamus are less than fulfilling. We ask a question and Adamus’ answer is always the same: “Figure it out for yourselves. I’ll let you know if you’re right or wrong.”

- I have two U.S. patents and one international patent in the field of telecommunications. One of the patents is titled “Multi-Dimensional Communications” because it is based on the reuse of radio frequencies in different polarizations, or dimensions. What I did back then and what I do now are totally different, but I like the wink from the angelic realms about the patent in Multi-Dimensional Communications.

- Tobias used to hang around Linda and me all the time. Hardly a day went by when we didn’t feel or hear from Tobias. He was like the third wheel in our relationship. Adamus doesn’t come around much unless we’re preparing for a Shoud or workshop. When he does, it’s usually 2:00 in the morning. I used to wonder, “Why 2:00 in the morning?” until Adamus told me that the Ascended Masters Club is on European time, so it’s 10:00 in the morning for him. He likes chatting while he’s having his morning coffee. (I don’t buy it, not one bit. I think he likes waking me up in the middle of the night.)

But the real Crimson Circle news is so outlandish that even the tabloids would be challenged to run our stories. The headlines would look something like this:

- “Thousands of Atlanteans prepare for enlightenment”
- “Paranormal researchers discover people who claim energy works for them without cost or effort”
- “Group members turn into Merlins after eating chocolate and drinking wine”
- “Ascended Master declares that humans are the most sacred species in the universe”
- “Gaia bids farewell to Earth, says it’s time for humans to care for the planet”
- “Members of spiritual group choose to stay on earth to counteract robot invasion”
- “Scientists discover new human species called Homo Christos”
- “All is Well in All of Creation”

I had fun reading the tabloid headlines the other day, but what we are doing as Shaumbra tops any story a tabloid could cook up. Last lifetime on the planet? Embodied Realization is already a done deal? Energy is just communication and it actually serves you? You can make yourself invisible? We’re here to bring consciousness to the planet at the Time of Machines? Our light will illuminate potentials at this most-critical time on the planet?

I am in awe of Shaumbra. It goes further than admiration or respect. It is a deep sense of amazement and wonder. Just look at what we’re doing, in our own quiet and unassuming way. Even a tabloid magazine couldn’t top our story.

PROGNOST 2020 – Adamus’ Annual Planetary Forecast
Louisville, CO & ONLINE – También en Español • January 18, 2020

Since 2014 ProGnost has become one of the most sought after Shaumbra events of the year. Adamus, dedicated to guiding us into our embodied Realization, doesn’t usually address the state of the planet, politics, aliens, the environment or the future. But twice a year he reveals what he and the other Ascended Masters foresee for our planet in the years ahead.
 Originally channeled by Tobias, it’s among the most transformational classes offered by the Crimson Circle. We offer it online once a year only. “Aspectology is natural. It is natural for any creator being to create actors of itself, to create aspects that will serve it. It is a natural thing for all of these aspects to return back home, sooner or later. Somewhere deep within, you have chosen to make this the lifetime, the Point of Presence, for welcoming all of your aspects back home.” – Tobias.

THE THRESHOLD
Kona, Hawaii – USA • March 22–26, 2020

The Threshold is a premium Crimson Circle event based on what Adamus Saint-Germain calls The Threshold of Enlightenment. According to Adamus, our journey on the spiritual path has encompassed many lifetimes, but now we hesitate at the threshold of the realization of enlightenment.

MASTER’S PAUSE SERIES

I AM Merlin
NEW! MASTER’S PAUSE – I AM MERLIN
NOW AVAILABLE AS VIDEO & AUDIO DOWNLOAD

Merlin is a title taken on by many Masters of the past. Now comes the time for the new Merlins to take their place on Earth. It is the integration of your own Master self, your own wisdom, for Merlin is the human in awareness of its mastery. With this integration, the magic begins. Your truth and passion come forward. You, the Merlin, remain always open to your own energy, allowing a life of magical synchronicity.

In this very special Master’s Pause, Adamus talks about what it means to be the new Merlin. It is about allowing, trust, and absolute openness to energy. He gives a very important caution to never use magic on others or with agenda and control, then leads a beautiful experience of deep integration, accompanied by music that he says is embedded with supporting energy and consciousness.

The way of the Merlin is never closing down to energy, never holding back, always open to your own energy in your own life.

I recently started reading Maria Szepes’ novel The Red Lion again, and to my delight I came across this forgotten segment at the start of the book. A psychiatrist describes his pioneering theory:

“I called my system metapsychoanalysis. By my definition, the psyche is the immortal intelligence which in this world is most highly developed in the consciousness of man. The peak of man’s awareness unfortunately compares to the limitless Spirit as does a speck of dust to the Cosmos. A disease of the soul means there is some kind of damage to the bridge, the organs that transmit between the individual and the spirit. He who would doctor the soul must diagnose and correct this malfunction with Seventy-three years later, the world is still filled with raging living dead, and the entrancing effect of psychotropic drugs and technology doesn’t help. I have no passion to change that. However, in the midst of this hypnotized humanity roaming the Land of Blue, rebellious souls are beginning to awaken. Now that I am passionate about.

As many Shaumbra are or have been psychologists, psychiatrists or counselors, I would like to open a discussion on the role of psychology in the Time of the Machines. I will also use this opportunity to share my own vision about it.

The irony is that mainstream psychologists pride themselves as being experts and researchers of consciousness, while limiting their interest in consciousness to the study of the mind. In fact, they consider the Self as the mind. In other words, they study the mind from within the mind and call that studying consciousness. If they do admit the possibility of the existence of a consciousness that transcends time, space, thoughts, emotions and biology, they still refuse to give that possibility any place in the psychology field. Let religion and philosophy deal with such vague and eccentric ideas, they say. The desire of the psychology field to be part of the cool kids’ club (the scientific community) is the biggest limitation of the field. Come to think of it, the obsession of being perceived as scientific is what limits all current sciences, but that’s a debate for another time.

The point is, psychology is very blue. Proposing a psychology that is based on Gnost rather than scientific evidence, sovereignty rather than mass consciousness, and communication with Soul rather than interpersonal relationships breaks all the core assumptions upon which modern psychology is built. That is why any pioneering theory that doesn’t fit into the limited paradigm of mainstream psychology is quickly swept under the carpet. And beware of saying “I am God, also” or you’ll be diagnosed with a narcissistic personality disorder!

So you see why creating a ‘new energy psychology’ is a challenge. Whereas mainstream psychologists talk about consciousness without being conscious, it would serve new energy psychologists best to not talk about consciousness too much (in the field) but simply be conscious. We can remain quite invisible, and still the ones who are awakening and truly interested in our approach will be able to see the magic.

Just to be clear, I respect the psychology field and see it as being very supportive for those who still operate within mass consciousness. In the “normal” human condition, i.e. before awakening, our aspects are basically internalized relationships, and modern psychology is based on this understanding: The cause of our problems, and therefore the solutions to those problems, are found all the efficiency and thoroughness of clinical research. If he only treats the symptoms, he may well fill mental institutions – and the world – with raging living dead.”
in the way we relate to other people. Although there are hundreds of psychotherapy modalities available today, they are all based on this premise. Cognitive-behavioral therapies focus on our beliefs, thought patterns and behaviors in the context of relationships. Psychodynamic therapies focus on the attachment patterns adopted in our childhood, and so on. So even if the approaches may seem very different, the key is always interpersonal relationships. And this does make sense if one operates within mass consciousness, and is energetically, neurochemically and mentally interdependent on other people.

However, in our self-realization a radical shift happens, as we no longer automatically internalize every outer experience. Interpersonal relationships – once our greatest mirror and the raw material for our human identity – move to the background as we turn our awareness within and learn how to relate to ourselves in a conscious way. As we move from awakening into mastery, we also expand our sense of self beyond the limits of the mind, and start exploring who we are beyond our conditioning, in other words, beyond collective consciousness.

The consequence is that the deeper we move into our awakening and out of the mind, the less modern psychology applies to us. We might still live in the midst of society, but we are no longer locked into the hypnosis of mass consciousness. So the psychological theories developed within the collective consciousness for the collective consciousness no longer apply to us.

Yet, because awakening rips apart our human identity and breaks down all of our defense mechanisms, it is practically inevitable to experience mental imbalance during our awakening. Most psychologists would see the symptoms of awakening – which look very similar to “normal” mental imbalances – yet not recognize them for what they are: natural symptoms and side-effects of awakening. For example, the loss of passion and the disconnection from mass consciousness that naturally take place during awakening might look very similar to clinical depression. The psychologist may then treat the symptoms with little or no success, because in the end, the real cause of the symptoms is not understood.

This is where a psychotherapeutic model designed for individuals who are awakening is needed. (At least, it would prove to be supportive and helpful. I got through my own awakening without a ‘new energy psychologist,’ but there were countless dark nights of the soul when I wished there would have been one.) Although the Sexual Energy School and the Aspectology School are immensely valuable, some might prefer more continuous one-on-one facilitation. Also, not everybody who is awakening is into channeled messages (no offense, Adamus!).

Although there are some spiritual approaches in this field, such as Transpersonal psychology, Buddhist psychology, and Jungian psychoanalysis, I wouldn’t call these approaches ‘new energy psychology,’ Interestingly, Maslow, who is widely known for his theory on the hierarchy of needs, later in life modified his theory and claimed that the highest form of human consciousness is what he called ‘transhuman consciousness,’ which transcends the mind and personality (remember the Transhuman Shoud series?). Maslow studied individuals who were not only interested in personal growth, but actually transcended the human personality. He called these people ‘transcenders.’ Unfortunately, he died before developing his theory further.

While these approaches to spiritual psychology undoubtedly contribute to expanding the field, I’m not entirely convinced that they are appropriate for facilitating awakening individuals (unless the psychotherapist themselves is awakened). After all, being spiritual doesn’t always equate with being conscious. Spiritual psychology – unless facilitated by a realized individual – can quickly drown the awakening client in a pool of makyo. As far as I know, there are very few psychologists who specifically facilitate individuals who are awakening. Thus my vision would be to create a new approach for this particular purpose.

In my vision of new energy psychology, the purpose is not to attempt to perfect, rescue or even heal the human facet, but merely provide a safe space for it, bring awareness of its role in the wholeness of Self, and accept it in all its rawness, vulnerability and courage. In my perspective it is still useful to have clinical training in order to recognize which mental imbalances are symptoms or side-effects of awakening, and also to evaluate if it is safe to support the client in going beyond the mind. For example, someone who is very fragmented and has dissociative symptoms due to trauma would benefit more from conscious breathing and help with creating a safe space than anything else. In such a situation, encouraging the client to transcend mass consciousness is likely to lead to more suffering rather than freedom. There is a difference between transcending the mind and losing one’s mind, but it’s not always obvious. It takes both clinical discernment and consciousness to support the client in a safe yet agenda-free way.

As technology continues to evolve and artificial intelligence permeates our lives, it is likely that the Internet of Things will become the new web of collective consciousness – meaning that the gravitational pull of mass consciousness will be heavier than ever and it will be harder to find the way out of the mind and into sovereignty. Luckily, every one of us who has chosen to transcend the mind is contributing to a New Energy Psychology by being living Standards. Even those Shaumbra who have nothing to do with the psychology field will create new pathways and potentials for living sans suffering, and thus create templates of ‘metapsychological wellbeing.’ The most important role of the conscious psychologist is to say: “Hey, look, there’s this potential of being all that you are, to live a sovereign life free of suffering. If these people can do it, so can you.”

I would love to hear from other new energy psychologists. Whether we call it metapsychology, transhuman psychology, gnostic psychology, or something else, it’s time to go beyond the mind in the field of mental health! Let’s bring magic back and create an agenda-less, power-free, transhuman approach to psychology.

For her master’s thesis, Kim studied how dramatic techniques can be applied to help in the process of integration after trauma (think of Aspectology and Act of Consciousness combined). Having just finished her studies in clinical psychology, she is ready to explore how consciousness can be applied in the field of psychology. If you’d like to participate in the conversation, you are welcome to join the new Facebook group, Psychology in the New Energy. Kim can also be reached through her website: www.kimseppala.com.
To celebrate the end of the Passion 2020 Shoud series, celebrate with a big Shaumbra gathering in September 2020 in Bled, Slovenia. Bled, in the area of one of St. Germain’s old Mystery Schools, is a beautiful setting surrounded by mountains, Lake Bled and Bled Island. Bled is a small village less than an hour’s drive from Ljubljana, the capital of Slovenia. It’s easy to access from just about anywhere in Europe, the prices are reasonable, and we know the area well because we’ve been there 5 times in the past.

This gathering will be a blend of an annual celebration, a Merlin workshop and what used to be the Midsummer New Energy Conference. The September 2020 event will feature channels from Adamus and the yet-to-be-announced entities and angels. Throughout the two-day gathering we’ll be blessed with merabh and dance music from Yoham, featuring Gerhard Fankhauser, Einat Gilboa and several new musicians.

The full line-up of channels, presentations and music will be posted at a later date, but there’s one thing we know for certain: When Shaumbra from around the world get together there’s sure to be plenty of good times, laughter, tears and energy shifts. Every time we’ve done a big annual Shaumbra gathering, whether in Colorado, Santa Fe, Sibiu, Munich or Bled, the energies are high and the sweet memories last forever.

Even though September 2020 seems to be a long time away, make sure to register early and make your hotel reservations as soon as possible, as these events always sell out quickly. There are plenty of hotels and hostels in the area but availability could be limited with hundreds of Shaumbra descending on the village.

THE CAUSE OF NATURE
I love nature and most of Shaumbra do as well. According to Adamus it is the number one thing we’ll miss when leaving Earth. But if we love nature, what about climate change, global warming, species extinction, dolphins and whales?

I grew up in the pure and natural surroundings of the Austrian Alps and spent most of my free time as a child in nature. I loved to explore the nearby lakes, rivers and forests, and stay in our wooden cabin higher up in the mountains. From a very young age, I would go with a few friends to remote valleys or alpine meadows to camp, sometimes for several days. We would make campfires, cook simple food, collect berries and mushrooms, and basically feel very comfortable and at home in nature.

I have felt this desire and love for nature throughout my life, and wherever I go around the world, I find refuge and the sense of home in natural surroundings. I feel nourished, refreshed, balanced, inspired and peaceful after receiving the pure harmony of nature, its colors, sounds, smells, shapes, textures and the perfect interplay of all its elements. I could go on and on here praising nature, its infinite richness, beauty and expression, and the magical spirit of stones, plants, animals and all creatures here on this planet. I do not feel myself as separate from nature, at least my human part doesn’t.

We are living in a time of great transformation of human consciousness, and nature is also undergoing major changes. For many years now, we have been learning more and more heart-breaking facts about the destruction of nature and natural habitats all around the globe. We all know about things like the plastic pollution in the oceans, the aftereffects of the Fukushima nuclear disaster for the sea and its creatures, the rapid melting of the ice shelves and subsequent rising sea levels, the steadily increasing number of droughts, flooding and forest fires, and this list could go on and on and on.

We are constantly bombarded with all kinds of information about global warming and climate change and it seems as if we’re in the beginning of an ecological disaster that could threaten the very foundation of human life here on Earth; and somehow, we have to deal with all of that. I’ve been consciously watching the cycles of nature in Austria for many years, and kind of said goodbye to regular seasons a while ago. The weather patterns are becoming increasingly unpredictable and extreme, and I feel concern at times about where all of this is going.

During the last couple of years Adamus has made various statements concerning nature and its changes, and I must admit that I got a little bit confused by his perspective. It seemed to me like an uncaring attitude and even a slight arrogance towards all of that; like it’s ‘no big deal’ for a Grand Ascended Master while sipping his cappuccino in the Master’s Club. In some channels he ridiculed nature healing rituals and ceremonies, joked about certain esoteric groups trying to save dolphins and whales, and in general really played down the importance of any kind of action regarding what is happening to nature and Earth. On top of that, his declarations that “Gaia is leaving” and “Old Earth and New Earth are not coming together” didn’t really make things easier.

At the end of the recent Master Code workshop in Norway, we were offered one of the rare opportunities to ask questions and I addressed the issue of nature. I asked Adamus to share with us his point of view concerning the changes in nature, the need for action, and our role in all of that. Shouldn’t we, Shaumbra, if we truly love nature, gather our forces and be a clear voice against all that destruction? Isn’t there a chance, if many realized Masters join together, to facilitate a shift of some kind and prevent an apocalyptic scenario here on Earth? Shouldn’t we try to preserve what we love for future generations?

I was very curious about his answer and got really surprised. Watching Adamus while he responded to my question, I felt a lot of compassion from him. There was compassion and love radiating from his eyes and flowing through his words. He was not downplaying the importance of the issue but rather expressed his empathy to what I and many of us feel – our deep love for nature and our struggle with what is happening on the planet.

Adamus truly acknowledged the importance and magic of nature, but he made one thing very clear. It is not for us Shaumbra to “make nature our cause.” Others will do that, and many are already. It is not for us to go out and fight on the forefront of those battles. Others will take on that responsibility and are already doing so.

He said that our job and function is simply different. We are not supposed to engage in fights and battles of any kind, but to solely focus on our Realization, our embodied enlightenment, and become fully realized Masters here on Earth. We are here to be present, aware and to fully shine our light, and in doing this we best serve the Earth and consciousness.

Even though I had heard similar messages from him before, this point suddenly got clear to me. I felt the wisdom and grander perspective of it and something inside of me relaxed. By our presence and awareness, we are serving the global consciousness of the planet and that itself might inspire actions, ideas or inventions that influence where all of this is going.

It’s like the difference between applying force on the surface of the water or creating a movement deep down in the ocean; not small ripples of action but big waves of consciousness.

Thank you for that clarification, Adamus! We are here to be standards of human consciousness and true Masters. Let’s be that!

THE MASTER’S LIFE, PART 10: WAY OUT

To experience the freedom of embodied Realization, one must release duality, mental focus and limitation. Adamus shares the three most important ways to do so – Focus, Gravity and Oneness. Learn to walk out and back in as desired, let your true passion blossom and become the new Merlin, a Master and friend of energy.

Humans have been trying to get back “Home” for eons of time, but the few who found their way found it nearly impossible to remain on Earth. Now, for the first time ever, there is a group of people who are determined to do just that, and Adamus is here to provide guidance and support for this, our true passion.

PROGNOST 2019 – UPDATE

Adamus opens with a clear reminder of why you are here and not get distracted by family, humanity, the environment, causes, politics or anything else. “Put all of yourself into your Realization,” he says, “for you are the dreamers of a whole new era. This is your true passion, and Merlin’s best friend, the dragon, will make sure that you bring no imbalances into it.”

He goes on to talk about the rapid advancement of technology and artificial intelligence, which will bring a conformity reminiscent of Atlantis. However, beings of consciousness like you will be here showing the way to the beautiful alternate reality of New Earth. Includes a Merabh for the Dreamers.

10 YEARS WITH ADAMUS

This grand event, held to commemorate ten years of guidance, support and distraction by Adamus Saint-Germain, was a turning point for Shaumbra. It was also the first appearance by Merlin to Shaumbra in general. Hear about the origins of Merlin, an energy birthed to keep magic alive on Earth, and its companion, the dragon. It is time now for each of us to become the Merlin and share our stories, wisdom and magic with the world.

The celebration included channels from Adamus Saint-Germain, Merlin and Kuthumi, as well as presentations by Birgit Junker, Jean Tinder, the Rude Awakening movie team and more, plus the unforgettable Adamus Roast. Four brave Shaumbra delivered their humorous comments, jabs and teasing to Adamus, followed by an enlightening and hilarious roast from Kuthumi.
Imagine this:

After traveling from a far-away place, you arrive at last on a tropical island. The climate is warm, the air is soft, and you’re tired but happy. After settling into your lodging, you get in a car and head out toward your final destination. Down the highway, past shopping centers and through neighborhoods, you finally see an unassuming little number sign. The entrance is so inconspicuous it could be easily missed, but here you are at last. Turning into the drive, you’re immediately surrounded by lush greenery, gorgeous flowers, and a little sign pointing toward the parking area. Rather than a typical asphalt parking lot, this one is covered in soft welcoming grass.

You get out of the car, excited, a little nervous, and awed by the beauty. Off to the right a little path leads to a delightful garden, and in front of you a sweeping staircase invites you upward. The stone walls are home to lush bits of moss and delicate seedlings, giving them the appearance of having been there since forever, yet the whole place is brand new. In a way, it’s reflecting your own sense of self – ancient and brand new all at once. Energy and consciousness is radiating from every corner and, even though you’re one of the first to arrive, it already feels full. You climb the steps and turn to take in a magnificent view of the ocean. There is nothing you can do for a moment except breathe.

Your hands rest on the railing, drawing your attention to its smooth, rich beauty. Looking around, you can feel the skill, pride and love that went into every inch of it, not to mention the walls, the roof, the floor, the steps, the lights, the handles, the landscaping – everything. The gorgeous sapele wood covering the inner surfaces is warm and cozy. The huge silent fans above keep the air moving in a gentle flow. The floor is a rich mirage of color and life. The smallest details of this place radiate dignity and joy, as if every little part were specifically designed for you in this moment, inviting you to relax into the nurturing beauty. Even though you are a visitor, it feels as if you’ve come home. You realize this is your energy serving you, and it tingles throughout your entire being.

This, my friends, is the Shaumbra Pavilion, an incredible space newly built just for you on the luminous grounds of Villa Ahmyo.

I recently had the privilege of spending a few days at the Villa. It was for some much needed ‘me time,’ plus I wanted to check on the progress of the Pavilion and add my energies to the project. By the time I left, the construction phase was practically complete, and other staff members would soon be arriving to set up the lighting, sound and other technical systems.

The Villa itself is a remarkable center of Shaumbra energy. From the minute I entered the house, I felt the air thick with radiance and passion. Chosen as a place to ground the energies of the Ahmyo Life and serve Shaumbra for many years to come, it has been infused with so much consciousness that the solitude is never empty. It’s a nurturing place of peace, balance and tranquility.

The amazing thing is that, whether or not you ever set foot on the property, because of the radiant network all of us have created (which I spoke about in Santa Fe), you can tap into it at any time and bring it into your own reality. Take a deep breath and feel into the gentle energy of Aloha – the Hawaiian word for “love, affection, peace, compassion and mercy” – and the joyful sense of arrival and completion from all who come to this place, past and future. It’s right here for you, available in every moment.

By the way, I noticed something interesting about the Villa while there: It is truly a “sovereign domain” on Earth. In other words, while it has been created from the love and generosity of all Shaumbra, Geoff and Linda are the custodians, so it is permeated with their energy. The practical side of this was most pronounced when I used the Villa van. It lives contentedly in the garage until its service is required, but I swear that car knows who it belongs to! More than once I was driving around and had the sense of something like an extra security system on board, providing constant subtle feedback and alerting me to concerns that might otherwise go unnoticed. It was very interesting to experience an “inanimate object” being so clearly in service, and I realized we can each do the same with our own belongings. By loving, caring for and choosing them, they are enabled to provide multiple levels of service and awareness. In fact, I experienced this with nearly everything throughout the Villa and surrounding property.

But back to the main attraction – our Shaumbra Pavilion. Beautifully designed by Horace Dinu, a Shaumbra architect, and built over the last several months with the best quality materials by workers who truly love the project, this magical place is a breathtaking example of the fusion of consciousness and energy. During my stay at the Villa, I walked many times down the curved and gently lighted steps to the Pavilion, whether to meet the workers, look at the latest progress, or just admire the view. And every single time I stepped into the space, I felt waves of shivers and goosebumps. Even if I just popped down for a moment to look at something or play with Belle, our beautiful dog-gie guardian, I would be caught off guard by the waves of energy suddenly racing through my body. The vitality is palpable!

Speaking of dear Belle, I usually feel more drawn to kitties, but this beautiful four-legged being could win anyone’s heart! She’s never happier than when lounging close by or even supervising the humans in their tasks. While her official residence is at the neighbor’s house next door, she has adopted the Villa as her own. Every morning she brings a gift, usually a single leaf or maybe some other treasure, and exchanges it for a doggie treat. She is friends with all the workers and brings her balancing energy to share with attendees at every event, whether they are lounging in the grass, standing by the pool or soon sitting beneath the Pavilion’s roof.

The Pavilion is astonishing in its simple splendor. It’s like a sacred temple, open on three sides, the broad roof supported by pillars of wood rather than stone, the heart of a site that is consecrated to transformation. I spoke with Horace one day, and he was marveling at the months and years of synchronicities that led to that very moment. With awe in his voice he said, “It’s unbelievable. I feel like I’m working on the gates of heaven.” That’s exactly what we’ve created, Shaumbra, right here on Earth!

Eventually it was time to go, but I wanted one more moment to watch one more sunset. As I stood in the welcoming, wide-open Pavilion surrounded by the gorgeous view of the ocean, the warm glow of the setting sun, the lushness of nature and the chorus of birds and coqui frogs, dear Shaumbra, I saw your faces there. I felt the Masters who bring their light to this magical place, weave it together, and add to the radiance that’s flowing through All That Is.

It’s a bit overwhelming to feel what all of us have done.
After all that letting go of the old, we are getting the tools now to bring the concepts we have known about for some time into daily experience, using Gravity, Focus and Oneness. The energies are so big, Adamus recommends re-experiencing them over and over. It is happening.

I felt like an actor standing in the wings of my stage on opening night. As prepared as I will ever be, while nothing is rehearsed, and the majority of me is drawing a blank. Feeble last-ditch trick of the mind telling me I cannot do this. Then I start moving, out into the light of the stage, and I see myself playing my part. And I watch as I write the next lines. And I rise in standing ovation to my performance. All that simply for signing up for the greatest show humanity has ever put on: Embodied Realization.

What should I say to the next restaurant hostess that greets me with “Just you? Party of one?”

JUST ME IS RIGHT, and you can bet your clueless butt IT IS A PARTY!”

DEEP & PERSONAL

If ever a mystery, the grandest simplicity, is revealed to us, it is in Way Out. Over the course of 5 sessions with intense merabhs, Adamus addressed 2 keys questions: How will we stay on the planet? and How will we deal with energies?

Give yourself a “pre-holiday” gift and experience Master’s Life 10. It’s given for you to experience, not for 90 days, but for a whole year of 365 days, as Adamus invites us to experience the merabhs 5 to 10 times each!

Master’s Life 10, Way Out, is a profound & majestic experience. It is filled with our returning magic, inviting you to remember who you are, experiencing the “tools” to find the Way Out, expanding into renewed awareness of your true passion to go Way Out, then come back when you want, and ultimately being aware that you are in both simultaneously.

THE ANSWER TO A LIFE-LONG LONGING

In my teens, I was searching for what was behind, what was underneath. Always wanting more depth. I Am Remembering feels like a key to knowing who I Am. And as Adamus says in the beginning, I couldn’t have used the key before. That would have blown me up. It is so difficult to describe my experience with this. Most of what is going on is about feeling.

~ AMA

I AM SO GRATEFUL

What a ride of beautiful remembrance. And it is still going on. St. Germain, more than Adamus, leads into a discussion about how and why we didn’t remember up until now, and that now it is indeed the time to re-member; our true name, the reason why we personally chose to be here, and the passion. Our deepest and truest passion. Wow.

~ PS

THIS IS THE STATE OF GRACE

When the student is ready the Elixir appears. I Am Remembering is like suddenly a stream of golden sweet honey flows into every part of me and it changes everything. The way I perceive myself, the way I remember the past and the way I choose the future is different now. This Master’s pause is truly a wonderful magical experience for everybody who is ready. It is here because we are ready.

WHAT A GIFT!

Into the second half of the channel I found myself in a flood of tears, feeling into who I am & where I’m moving into now these days. Feeling the awareness that was there all of my life, a wise soulful human being came deeply rushing through my body, the knowingness, the compassionate flow now for myself. My longing to be within my own creation has been there all my life, calling at me, and this year I’m choosing it more & more. Such a beautiful message and the perfect moment.

~ DS

I REMEMBER

An expanded perspective of remembering who we are, why we’re here, what’s ours, our name and our true passion. I Am more aware of existing in many dimensions (little scary driving sometimes!!). It’s nothing in my mind; it’s not a place, it’s a feeling, but not a feeling I can describe with words.

~ PS
There are so many ways to speak those two words. Possessively – “He’s my love, you leave him alone!” Affectionately – “My love for you knows no bounds.” Longingly – “My love is far away.” Remorsefully – “My love for you is gone.” But lately, they have been floating through me with the essence of fulfillment – “Oh, my love…” More and more, in every sort of moment, I am overcome with such a feeling of love I can hardly breathe. Warmth blossoms in my heart and contentment soothes every cell of my weary body as I whisper yet again, “Oh, my love…” to the one I love the most - me. The acceptance is palpable, the tenderness sublime as I open to something far more than a lovely concept or a gesture to someone else. This love changes realities.
About twelve years ago I had a brief but memorable experience. I had just prepared a meal and as we sat down to eat, a wave of profound love suddenly washed over me. It was more fulfilling than anything I’d ever felt before, and with it came the answer to every question I’d ever asked, including that original query about my very existence and identity. On the next breath I felt myself reaching out to my angelic family with the news. “I did it! I found the answer!! It's so simple but it solves everything!” Silent tears fell as I sensed them receive my message, and with that, my mission was complete. Everything I had set out to do, was done. I was free.

And then the intensity faded, my stomach reminded me it was waiting for food, and life went on.

Since that moment, of course, there have been plenty of challenges, questions, projects, puzzles, disappointments, tears and all the other complicated things of human life. But the sense of completion has stayed with me, not always at the top of my awareness but always in there somewhere. And I know I’m not the only one; all of us have been “working” on this and transmitting similar messages back to our ancient families. And now, particularly in Keahak and no doubt coming soon to all Shaumbra, Adamus is talking about the very specific effects this completion is having on those families and even on the Order of the Arc. I’ll leave the details for him to share, but for me it all comes back to My Love.

If you’ve attended the Sexual Energies School, you know that Tobias uses this phrase “My love” when he describes the healing, rebalancing alchemy of self-love. But there’s something more that inspired me to write about it at this time. A couple things, actually. Well, maybe three.

The first is that this feeling of love and completion within is growing. Rather than an occasional remembrance, it’s with me now most of the time. I can be working away at my desk, driving down the road, preparing a meal, drifting off to sleep or anything else, and with just a breath that warmth washes through me – the love of my Self for me. I treasure solitude, no doubt partly because it’s easier to be aware of this love when I’m alone. But I’m even starting to be aware of it in the presence of others, which I find quite amazing. Have you ever had a mundane everyday conversation while sweet fire is drifting through your body? Most of the time now, I feel its pull, the gentle tug to float away into the endless ocean of inner oneness. Sometimes it’s so compelling that I’ve told my Self, Adamus, Kuthumi and whoever else is listening that when my moment comes, they MUST remind me of my choice to stay. Because I can really feel how easy it might be to forget. Which leads me to the second thing.

So far this year, at least 20 Shaumbra have crossed over (many of them remembered on the In Memoriam page of the Crimson Circle website), and those are just the ones we know about. Whether they were realized or not doesn’t really matter; for whatever reason, they chose to leave Earth and work with us from the other side. Adamus has mentioned this, stating that many Shaumbra will be working from both sides to create a sort of bridge between the realms. But no matter how noble the choice, it still aches when a loved one discards their body. My personal feeling is that this will be happening more in the years to come, not because we’re “getting old” but because the inner oneness is so much more inviting than the outer chaos. Which brings up the third thing.

Over the last few months Adamus has been shifting his focus from allowing our Realization to “how to stay.” I actually feel a sense of gentle urgency, nothing like a crisis but more like “Okay, you’ve learned to fly. Now, before you disappear off into the sunset, here’s how to keep yourself going.” In a sense, Adamus doesn’t really care what we do. We’re eternal beings and this Earth experience is just a blip in time, albeit an important one. But we have said we want to stay and share our light in this place we love so much, so he’s answering our call.

I see it as if we poured our heart and soul and life into an epic movie production about how to find The Way Out, and then deciding to stick around to see what effect it has on those who watch it. No one knew quite how the movie would turn out, or if the concept would even work. There was a lot of R&D (research and development) involved in making it, and no doubt the sponsors (our angelic families) and production studio (Order of the Arc) wondered at times if we’d completely lost the plot. But here we are, wrapping up production and wondering if anyone will come to see it. (In that regard, Adamus has “warned” that it’s likely to be a blockbuster…)

We carry it all within us now. The script, actors, sets, locations, special effects and supporting crews – we cooked it all up to tell a captivating story complete with monsters, plot twists and unexpected heroes. The spoiler? It’s all about My Love. But I don’t think the masses are going to believe that at first, which is why we want to linger all the way through the credits, no matter how much we’re looking forward to the after-party. We are the living proof of concept.

My Love. My Oneness. It’s really all I need from this moment on. But will I stay? I’ve made my choice and reaffirmed it many times, but still sometimes I wonder. Perhaps the concern comes from an old pattern. You’ve heard of near-death experiences where the body is left behind and the newly deceased is met by an experience of light and love so profound it cannot possibly be put into words. To simply call it “love” doesn’t even begin to touch the reality.

So, think about that for a moment. You’ve died countless times and have therefore felt this overwhelming, welcoming Love at the end of many lifetimes. The human might have called it God or angels or whatever fit their current belief... system, but it was really your Self, welcoming you back Home, helping you release the lifetime just ended and recharge before diving back in. So, what happens when you feel a taste of that unfathomable love while still in your body? Does it begin triggering the old process of release and reunion? For me, I’ve been a little worried that I’ll forget to keep my body when that exquisite love envelops me, but perhaps it’s just an old habit. We weren’t “real- ized” every time we died, but it’s probably the closest thing our human self can relate to, and therefore it (perhaps unconsciously) equates self-reunion with death. But can you imagine opening to that much love, consciousness and light – and staying right here on Earth? What possibilities open up in that state? That’s what Adamus is beginning to talk about, and the timing is perfect, I think.

My Love. It’s there. You don’t have to work at it or search for it or conjure it up. It’s right here, waiting for you. And you don’t have to die in order to experience it. You only need to open to your own energy.

Adamus has done many merabhs over the years, but one of my favorites is Love of Self, with Yoham. He invites you to sing a song of love to you, one that carries all the sadness and joy you’ve ever felt, the history of your journey, all the feelings of longing, waiting, hoping. It’s a beautiful, touching invitation. It’s also a little awkward, because I’m not the best singer or songwriter, and trying to come up with a love song to myself feels a little silly. But sometimes I find myself humming or even whistling, and that’s when the expression flows. A song doesn’t need to have words – duh! – it’s a simple expression that carries my love.

Can you allow it for yourself? If you do, it will change the way you see yourself, touch yourself, speak to yourself, be with yourself. I know this, because just in the last few weeks it has meant things like releasing ancestral ties, not in rejection of family but in love for myself; changing how I eat, not to fix something but to love myself; choosing how I spend my time, not to fulfill a responsibility but to love myself; allowing myself to express, not to make someone else more comfortable but to love myself. As My Love becomes the foundation of my life, everything changes.

My Love. What a gift to All That Is, to your angel family, to yourself. And it’s here, never lost or broken, only waiting to be realized and allowed. The answer has always been within. And with that knowing, all creation begins to change.

“This love of Self, perhaps one of the most difficult things a human will ever, ever do, is indeed the fulfillment, the dream, the completion.” – Adamus
SHAUMBRA MAGAZINE: How and when did you find Crimson Circle?

ALAIN: At the Quantum Leap (in 2007)! My partner, Patricia Aburdene, was invited to give a speech at the event, so I went with her on the trip and showed up at the Quantum Leap – and wasn’t quite sure what I’d stepped into! It was a lot of people that seemed very happy to see each other, which was very interesting to observe. Patricia and I were both interested in how to bring Spirit into business, so we had been around many strange conferences, but not that strange. We weren’t exactly sure what was going on. But hearing Adamus was the big turning point.

SM: Do you know how Patricia connected with Crimson Circle?

ALAIN: Geoff and Linda saw her book, The Rise of Conscious Capitalism, and they wanted a speaker with a business orientation, so they reached out to her and she said yes (after her agent initially said no).

SM: After that experience, did you start tuning in right away or did it take you a while to connect?

ALAIN: There was one short channel of Adamus, somewhere in the middle of the conference, that had us to the edge of our seats. We had already decided to leave early, but after that first channel with Adamus we decided to stay to the end to hear the last channel, by Adamus too. We had agreed “We’ll just listen for 15 minutes and then go,” because we had to get on the road. And then every five minutes, “We can stay a bit more,” so we stayed to the end and then took off because by then we were really late. But we were like “Wow, that was amazing!” This was new and it really hit something. On the first day, I had “randomly” picked up Masters in the New Energy from the book table to see what this was all about. Around that time, we had moved to Boulder and found out Crimson Circle was close by, so we started coming to the Shouds and got to know Geoff and Linda between their travels. They needed some help and business consulting is what I do, so little by little it began to take off.

SM: What skills did you bring to the job?

ALAIN: Well, I had already a pretty fat suitcase of things I had accumulated. I have a lot of business background and have done energy work and things like that, so it just depends what shows up, and I use whatever I feel is needed. I was a finance person but was first trained as a linguist at university. I was also a political science major and was also interested in economics and systems and social philosophy. I had also done teaching and translation, but all those things went to the background when I went into banking and finance. Then, at the moment of awakening when you hit the wall and say, “What am I going to do next?” it all kind of merged together. And that’s when I became interested in learning how to change business with consciousness.

At that point I realized that everything I had ever done was coming into play. I had all these differently trained aspects and it was like, “Oh, I get it now. I know why I did that thing for 15 years.” It was to have this deep understanding of business and financial systems and be able to do something else with it.

A big skill I have is my ability to take in a lot of different parts of a system, make sense of them and build systems that work. And it may be a technology system, but it always includes people, and I can make sure they have what they need to be at their best, understand what they need to do, what is the goal of the team, and make sure everything works holistically for the best possible outcome.

SM: How would you define the job that you do for Crimson Circle?

ALAIN: I think I’m a little bit of the glue, or maybe more like the “anayatron” or communication facilitator. When Geoff and Linda are on the road and doing other things, I’m around to make sure that we’re still on track, that people know what to do, that they have what they need, that the systems are running effectively or, if they’re not, that we try to do something about it. I see myself more in the wings, but stepping in as needed, and also helping Geoff and Linda. Because they’re very busy on the road all the time, they need these moments of reprieve where I can work with them and say, “Okay, let’s think about the future and what needs to happen, and let’s think about setting some parameters.” Because if you don’t spend a little time doing that in a quiet space, it gets very overwhelming and you’re constantly running and trying to keep up. So, over the years we’ve always taken one or two solid days each year of really stepping back and looking at everything, and then periodically cycle back to say, “Where are we on this or that?” It’s building an awareness, “We need to be aware of this and think about it.”

SM: It seems like you bring clarity.

ALAIN: Well, out of the awareness the clarity may not be there right away, but eventually it will come through. One of the strengths of Crimson Circle as a group of humans working together is that we can propose a hypothesis, play it out, discuss it, try it and then very quickly decide, “No, that was really not right” or “Yes, this is a good evolution.” I think we’ve become better and better at seeing when things need to be corrected.

SM: What would you say is the most challenging part of the job?

ALAIN: Sometimes it is trying to make sure that I know what Geoff and Linda are thinking. Most of the time I feel I know, but sometimes when they’re on the road, things come up where I go, “That’s not quite how I remember the discussion.” It’s not my agenda; I just don’t want to give the wrong information or create something that’s not in keeping with the general agreement.
SM: What do you like most about the job?

ALAIN: It’s really been the ‘proof in the pudding’ for me, how an organization can create so much inspiration and be so inspired and produce so much in terms of direct output. With basically the same number of people as when I came on 10 years ago, with a little extra help here and there, we’ve created this amazing flow of consciousness. And being available to produce what Adamus wants to put out at an amazing pace. So, we’re just there in the flow. And being in the flow means you also get all the side benefits of it, so to speak. Sometimes it’s a little intense to integrate everything. I think everybody goes through those periods, and it’s visible that someone may be having a hard time, not in the sense that they fall apart, but because there’s just so much going on with the material itself and to still have to keep at it. Geoff and Linda are the first to put demands on themselves, and when I consider what they do I always think, “It’s good it’s not me” because that kind of traveling and being ‘on’ with people, even though you’re enjoying it, it’s very, very tiring.

SM: What’s your passion? And what would you like to Shaumbra to know about you?

ALAIN: Passion? I’m still looking for it! The biggest message that comes to me through Adamus is compassion, not so much passion. And continuing to grow in that compassion, which is letting people experience what they need or want to experience rather than feeding them the answers. For me, and also because I coach, it’s a continuous learning. I guess this could be like a passion – my passion is compassion. I may not appear as very compassionate to people, but it’s a deep sense to step away and let them hear from themselves what they need to hear.
